'The project to design and build the World Food Garden, a first for the RHS, challenged us in myriad ways,' says Ann-Marie Powell FSGD. 'I wanted to challenge the concept of the traditional walled vegetable garden and show that productive gardens can be beautiful, interesting and inviting.'

'Working with exceptionally qualified horticulturalists, creating an inclusive, inspiring and educational garden for visitors of all ages, outlook, ethnicity and experience, experimenting with all aspects of growing, ensuring seasonal interest and last but not least, using plants that are edible, the project was five years in the making, from concept to completion.'

WHAT THE JUDGES SAID:

A wonderfully immersive public space displaying a lovely mixture of edible, annual and perennial planting designed to inspire and educate visitors. A welcoming and diverse garden that provides an easily accessible source of inspiration and learning for all who visit it.
